Matthew Dimas

Matt Dimas is a highly skilled guitarist currently in his third year at the University of British Columbia (UBC). He recently graduated from the Music Diploma program at Capilano University and subsequently transferred to UBC to pursue his Bachelor's degree in Music. Born in Vancouver, British Columbia, Matthew has been playing guitar for over seven years. Initially, he began his musical journey with the electric guitar, which provided him with the opportunity to explore and appreciate a diverse array of genres, including rock, metal, classical, blues, and jazz. A significant source of inspiration for Matthew has been his father, who introduced him to the electric guitar and instilled a passion that led him to become largely self-taught.

Thanks to his versatile playing style, Matthew participated in talent shows during his high school years, winning two consecutive years in 2021 and 2022. His talent continued to shine as he performed in various ensembles and contemporary music groups at UBC, showcasing his exceptional soloing ability and virtuosity.

In addition to his academic and performance pursuits, Matthew was also an active member of the Vancouver Guitar Society, an affiliation that afforded him the opportunity to perform at prestigious venues such as the Vancouver Academy of Music, BlueShore Theatre, and numerous other events throughout the years.

Matthew is now applying his musical talents to teaching and songwriting, with aspirations of one day joining a band and continuing to make an impact in the music world.
